

Two talks by

Professor Kelly Lytle Hernández

Thursday, January 26, 2012

“Hoboes in Heaven: Tramps, Convict Labor and the Rise of Mass Incarceration in Los Angeles, 1880-1920”

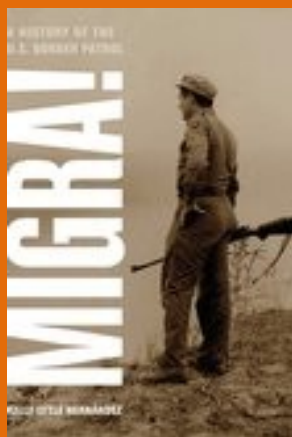

A talk for faculty and graduate students
(undergraduates and all others welcome)

CAHI (1211 E. Atwater Ave.), 1:00-3:00 p.m.

“Amnesty or Abolition? Felons, Illegal Aliens, and America’s Unfinished Abolition Movement”

A talk for all interested persons
No specialized knowledge required

Boxcar Books (408 E. 6th St.), 5:00-6:30 p.m.

Kelly Lytle Hernandez is associate professor in the UCLA Department of History and Associate Co-Director of the National Center for History in the Schools. She writes on twentieth-century U.S. history, race, migration, and police and prison systems in the American West and U.S.-Mexico borderlands. Her new book, MIGRA! A History of the U.S. Border Patrol (University of California Press, 2010) is the first book to tell the story of how and why the U.S. Border Patrol concentrates on policing Mexican immigration. Her current research focuses upon exploring the social world of incarceration in Los Angeles between 1876 and 1965.

Sponsored by IU Departments of American Studies, History, and Criminal Justice; the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies; the College Arts and Humanities Institute; and the Decarcerate Working Group, a joint project of Decarcerate Monroe County and Occupy Bloomington.

