InULA EXECUTIVE BOARD: August 3, 1973

The 1973-74 Executive Board of InULA held its first meeting on Friday, August 3. David Fenske, president, distributed a proposed schedule of board meetings and business meetings, which was approved by the board.

Larry Fortado, treasurer, reported a balance in the treasury of $1056.78. Six hundred dollars is in a savings account, and $456.00 is in the checking account. A change in the fiscal year, so that the dues year will coincide with the Association calendar, was discussed. Fortado agreed to develop proposals for implementation.

President Fenske proposed that InULA sponsor workshops or institutes for librarians. These might be partially funded by InULA with a modest registration fee charged. The board agreed that an ad hoc committee should be appointed to develop plans. Suggestions of possible members of the committee led to a general discussion of ways of getting more people involved, both here and at other campuses.

The balance of the meeting was taken up with discussion of possible chairmen of standing committees and of committee functions. It was agreed that committee composition would be completed in September.

InULA EXECUTIVE BOARD: September 7, 1973

The InULA Executive Board held its second meeting of the year September 7. The treasurer reported a balance of $1050.63. Plans for the September 11 general meeting were discussed.

Most of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of committee memberships. Members were suggested for the Standing Committee and the new ad hoc Planning and Advisory Committee. President Fenske reported that Dorothy Niekamp has accepted the chairmanship of the Program and Social Committee, and Julie Nilson that of the ad hoc committee. The board considered whether an InULA Grievance Committee is still needed and decided that it is, as a backup and possibly to serve those who don't elect to go on the new faculty track. The president will contact the proposed committee chairmen, and a complete list will be published later.

The board agreed to make the change to a dues year corresponding to the fiscal year, by making next year a short year and pro-rating dues. Details will be announced later.

Eva Kiewitt reported on the availability of lecterns and circulated literature. The board agreed on the selection of an adjustable lectern at a cost of $54.00.

INULA PROGRAM: SEPTEMBER 11, 1973
 the UNIVERSITY FACULTY CONSTITUTION
 Mary Wennerstrom
 Raymond Murray

The meeting of September 11, 1973, presented the University Faculty Constitution, and its effects on the University Library Faculty. The document, drafted during the preceding academic year, will replace the current faculty constitution, and was finalized during the spring semester, 1973. It is now being sent to the university faculty for final approval. The constitution should be accepted and in force by the end of the 1973-74 academic year.

The University Faculty Constitution provides for two voting members from the University Library Faculty, and these two voting memberships are guaranteed. No other division of the university has this WRITTEN GUARANTEE of membership on the faculty council. As a coordinating body for the entire university system, the faculty council seats assure the library faculty a voice in university faculty affairs.

There is also an attempt to acquire representation on local faculty councils for library faculty members. This type representation is already practiced on many regional campus faculty councils. There is, however, a problem in the Bloomington faculty council. With over one hundred library faculty members based in Bloomington, the number of Bloomington representatives to the University Faculty Council would be increased when including library representation. That fact, coupled with the guaranteed two Library Faculty Representatives to the University council would, in some circles, be considered double representation and might jeopardize library representation already gained on regional campus faculty councils.

FROM THE GRADUATE LIBRARY SCHOOL

The Graduate Library School has been funded by the United States Office of Education to conduct a year-long institute "Education for Urban Community College Librarianship." This institute, comprised of eighteen participants from minority groups, is a unique and innovative program in education for librarianship.

The institute proposal, the work of Dr. Shirley Edsall, a recent graduate of the GLS, and the administration and faculty, responds to the increased need for learning resources librarians in the burgeoning field of higher education, the community college.

This interdisciplinary program draws upon those areas of higher education, instructional systems technology, and library/information science relating specifically to the community college. Participants are involved in a number of learning experiences such as interaction with guest lecturers from the community college field, field trips to noted urban community college learning resource centers, practicums in the field of library services, "hands-on workshops" in instructional resources development, and other activities in the areas of adult education, curriculum development, vocational/technical education and community services.

Upon satisfactory completion of the program, participants will be awarded a Masters of Library Science degree and will seek positions in urban community colleges. GLS

DR. DAVID KASER has been appointed Professor, Graduate Library School, Indiana University, Bloomington, as of August, 1973. Born in Mishawaka, Indiana, Dr. Kaser has degrees from Houghton College (AB), The University of Notre Dame (MA), and the University of Michigan (AMLS and PhD). Since 1968 he has been Director of Libraries at Cornell University. Prior to that time, Dr. Kaser was Director of Joint Universities, Nashville, and held other academic library positions at Washington University, St. Louis, the University of Michigan, and Ball State University.

During this past year Dr. Kaser and his staff have been deeply involved with one of the nation's major academic management studies, which will give insight and direction to other libraries as well. His interests include the history of books and libraries and international librarianship as well as academic library administration.

Dr. Kaser's teaching experience includes assignments at Syracuse University, George Peabody College, and Ball State University. In 1968-69 he was President of both the Association of College and Research Libraries and the Tennessee Library Association. During the two previous years he served as Chairman of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries.
